LOCAL NEWS.

—The building of the Honesdale Footwear Co. is being pushed to completion rapidly, W. H. Krantz giving personal supervision to the work. The building will present a very imposing appearance, and will add to Honesdale's reputation as being a thriving manufacturing town.

—It is too bad that we cannot get a good big insurance from "Lloyd's" (who take any kind of a risk) on our Main street, then have something happen, and by that means get enough money to pay it decently. It is our only hope.

—The Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York city, has appointed C. T. Bentley to look after their interests in this section. This will not interfere with Mr. Bentley's present duties. He has a most excellent proposition to offer to those seeking life insurance.

—Next Sunday morning in the Presbyterian church, Mr. Swift will repeat the sermon preached by him twenty-five years ago, after his installation as pastor of that church. In the evening the topic will be "Salt."

—In honor of the 70th birthday anniversary of H. J. Conger, of the firm of Kraft & Conger, his pleasant residence on Court street has been made merry for some days past by a jolly party of his relatives, comprising Hon. and Mrs. Erastus Post, of Quogue, Long Island, N. Y.; Mrs. Ella Brown, of New York; Mrs. Sophie Hamilton, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Miss Ida Hamilton, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Master Myers Baker, of New York; Miss Jennie Baker, of New York, and Mrs. R. W. Ham, of this place. On Monday last Mr. Conger and his daughter, Miss Dora, entertained his guests at a dinner party at the Allen House.

—If you care to take a good spring tonic the Gardner-Vincent Stock Co. recommend you to witness a performance of their roaring farce comedy "What Happened to Brown," which takes place at the Lyric theatre on the evenings of Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. This three-act comedy was constructed for laughing purposes only, so if you have the spring fever or are suffering with a case of the blues, make it a point to see what did happen to Mr. Brown. Mr. Gardner takes the part of Timothy Brown, who marries a woman as homely as the rear end of a coach, but she is wealthy. He invites a friend and clubman, and his wife to pay them a visit and while there Mrs. Brown gets very jealous of the clubman's wife (Mrs. Stillman) and here is where the fun starts. Everything is in confusion and amid the most ludicrous situations one is compelled to laugh continuously to the end of the play. Miss Vincent will be seen as Mrs. Stillman, in a part that is entirely different from anything she has yet appeared in.

—"In Old New Hampshire," one of the most pleasing plays in the repertoire of the Gardner-Vincent Stock company will be produced for the third and last time this (Wednesday) evening. Most of the characters are quaint, homely and humorous, even to the villain, an old, cold-blooded hypocrite, who is much more amusing than villainous. Miss Vincent, as sweet Helen Gory, the forlorn and homeless waif, cannot fail to arouse the sympathy of any audience, and shows this talented little lady in a role so entirely different from any we have yet seen her in, that we wonder where her versatility is going to end. Mr. Gardner as big hearted Jim, a plain good natured fellow with a rough manner but a kindly heart, is one of the most striking characters we have seen him portray. The school room scene in the third act is one of the most excruciatingly funny seen in a long time and several specialties are introduced by members of the company.

—On Monday the Honesdale Consolidated Water company commenced excavating for their line of pipe on Church street. New six-inch pipe will replace the old main. The company purposes to make a number of improvements about town.

Tiffany, two to be elected.

Whittaker, the zealous rector of Grace church, Honesdale. On the previous Monday, Rev. Mr. Whittaker baptized seven adults at White Mills, and on Friday an equal number at Indian Orchard.

A front wheel of the buggy was broken and Mr. Vogler was cut about the face and received a few scalp wounds. His wife was in the water up to her neck, and would probably have drowned but for the assistance of Mr. Marshall. She was taken home and confined to her bed for a few days, but is able to be around again at this writing.

—On account of a general increase of business to which the R. F. D. routes have largely added, postmaster Allen has found it necessary to remodel the postoffice interior, with a view to affording more room for the employees. As a consequence the eastern main entrance door has been closed, and the lobby accommodations somewhat restricted; but the change as a whole seems to give satisfaction to the patrons of the office as well as to those employed in Uncle Sam's service.

—Richard H. Brown, contractor engaged in erecting the new high school building, made a misstep while working at the fire on Saturday morning last, and fell a distance of fifteen feet from a gang plank to the basement floor. He was seriously shaken up, and has since been confined to his bed, but fortunately no bones were broken or internal injuries received.

NEW SCHOOL BUILDING PARTIALLY BURNED

A Destructive Fire of Possibly Incendiary Origin Damages the High School to the Extent of $20,000.

The new and splendid structure approaching completion as the future home of the Honesdale high school, narrowly escaped total destruction on Saturday morning last. About half-past three David H. Menner, whose residence is directly opposite the new building on Church street, discovered the reflection of flames somewhere in the rear of the old wooden structure which is being utilized while the new building is being erected, and at once concluding that the former was on fire, hurried to the home of contractor Richard H. Brown, on Main street, to apprise him of the fact. By this time, however, others had discovered the real location of the trouble, and very shortly afterward the gong fire alarm was sounded, bringing out Protection engine company, with one steamer; the Alert hook and ladder company of East Honesdale, and the Chemical engine company of Texas No. 4. Hose was attached to several plugs, most convenient to the conflagration, and were soon in use; while the steamer was hurried to the foot of Tenth street, where considerable delay was occasioned in securing water owing to the fact that a large heap of rubbish was found to have been carelessly deposited just where the engine should stand.

In very creditable time, however, all the apparatus was effectively at work, and the various companies won warm encomiums for the zealous and efficient manner in which they discharged their duties. The fire for some time seemed to be confined to a small apartment or recess on the south side of the main building, just back of the bay window, and to this point the first streams were directed, but it soon became apparent that the flames were rapidly climbing to the upper story, and that heroic measures must be adopted to check their advance. It was at this crisis that the utility of the suburban companies was clearly to be recognized. By the aid of their long ladders the cornices were successfully scaled, and the firemen were enabled to attack the flames from above, and to direct their streams to points where they must prove effective.

Meantime the fire was persistently eating its way among the floor joints, partitions, ceilings, and everything else combustible, until the entire roof of the eastern half of the building was involved, and for some time, despite the heroic exertions put forth by the firemen, it looked as though the whole massive structure was doomed to destruction. Fortunately, however, the tide turned at this juncture, and soon it was realized that the worst—bad enough at that—was over. Besides more or less damage from smoke, water, etc., in all parts of the building, the entire interior of the western half of the building may be regarded as practically ruined. Estimates as to the damage vary from $10,000 to $20,000, which fortunately is fully covered by insurance. The risks were about equally divided among one borough agencies, so that no one company will be a sufferer to any very great extent. The adjusters are expected here to-day. Of course this misfortune will materially delay the completion of the building, which it was expected would be ready for occupancy by the 1st of September next.

New Baseball Rules.

A substituted pitcher must pitch until the man at bat when the pitcher takes his position has either been put out or reaches first base.

In case of interference with a fielder or batsman the ball is not in play until the pitcher, standing in his position, holds it and the umpire calls "Play!"

A batted ball that touches the person of the umpire or a player "while on or over fair ground" is a fair hit, and a batted ball that touches the person of the umpire or a player "while on or over foul ground" is a foul hit.

Hereafter in case of a player's ejection from the game by the umpire such player is out of both game and grounds. He must either go to the clubhouse or leave the grounds entirely under penalty of forfeiture of the game by the umpire.

Hereafter any ground rule must be acceptable to the captain of the visiting team, and if objectionable to said visiting captain the umpire has the power to adopt or reject said ground rule or rules.

He Knew.

They were country people pure and simple, but they had read the papers and thought they were educated up to all the improvements of a city. When they went to Washington they went through the Navy Department and saw the models of our ships of war. Pointing to a companion ladder hanging over the side of one of the boats, she asked her 'etter half what it was.

"Oh, that's the fire escape," replied the husband.—Lippincott's.

SPRING GUSHES APPLE BRANDY

Farmer Strikes Underground Lake in Pocket of Rock in Missouri—Regarded as "Unusual."

Springfield, Mo.—What chance has State-wide prohibition in Missouri when applejack, pure, undiluted apple brandy, mellow with age, bubbles up from the ground like a spring? When drilling a well on his farm, seven miles north of here, Joel Hazelwand struck a flow at eighty feet of undiluted apple brandy of unusually fine quality. A dozen bucketfuls of the liquor have bubbled up through the hole to-day, and there seems to be no diminishing in quantity.

Because of the Federal statutes Hazelwand is unable to sell his strike, but neighbors with jugs have been invited to help themselves, and dozens have accepted the invitation.

Geologists here are unable to give any definite account of the phenomenon, though they give credence to the theory of "Uncle Billy" Woodman, the oldest inhabitant. "Uncle Billy" says there was an orchard on the site of Hazelwand's farm before the civil war, and in the year of '62 there was an exceptionally bountiful crop.

Before the harvest all the men in the country had gone to war and there was nobody left to gather the crop. When the apples became ripe a terrific windstorm blew them from the trees and practically destroyed the orchard. The heavy rain that followed the wind washed the fruit into the creek, from where they were drawn into some subterranean stream.

The apples, somewhere in their underground journey were caught in a stream of boiling water and cooked. This formed the apple brandy, which filtered into a pocket of rock and remained there to mellow with age until tapped by Hazelwand's well.

The geology of this section of Missouri is such that the gathering of the brandy in a pocket of rock is entirely practicable, as the whole country is underlaid with a stratum of Burlington limestone. This limestone is easily eroded by water, and subterranean lakes are not infrequently found, although such a lake of apple brandy is regarded as unusual.

No Chanc for a Miracle.

One day Dr. Norman McLeod, who was a large, healthy man, and one of his burly elders went to pay a visit to a certain Mrs. MacLaren of the congregation, who lived in the Scotch Hills. She was a frugal woman, but determined that they should have the best in the house. So she piled the table with jellies and jam and preserves and shortbread, and they partook unsparingly. After the meal the elder said to her: "Mrs. MacLaren, were you at the Kirk on Sunday?" "Oh, yea," she said, "I was." "And what did you think of the treatment of the miracle?" (the sermon had been on the loaves and fishes). "I thought it was good," said Mrs. MacLaren. "And what is your idea on the subject, Mrs. MacLaren?" asked the minister. "Losh," said their hostess suddenly: "I'm thinkin' that if you and the elder had bin in the congregation there wadna bin twelve baskets of fragments for the disciples to gather up!"
